LOGLINE: A young girl, Violetta, is coming of age via her voyeuristic obsessions, which transport her out of a tragic home life.

MEDIUM SYNOPSIS: “Violetta” is a story about a young girl who is becoming, yet does not know how to be. Trying to navigate her isolated world, the relationships she has and the behaviors she encounters come to affect the understanding she has towards her own desires.

Violetta is an introverted Columbian girl living in Queens whose home life has become unbearable. During her efforts to escape, she finds herself socially inept and without the skill set to extend herself into the world. Because of this, she has taken up the practice of the voyeur, and when she begins to imitate the behaviors of a Dominatrix who lives across the street, she discovers a way to be that could harness her power.

LONG SYNOPSIS: "Violetta" is a short film, written and directed by Aaron Lehmann, about a young girl who is coming of age via her voyeuristic obsessions, which transport her out of a tragic home life. It was produced while attending the Stony Brook University | Killer Films graduate program in New York City. "Violetta" was inspired by, and filmed entirely in Jackson Heights, Queens.

Violetta lives with her father, Diego (Jorge Alberto Alvarado), in a claustrophobic apartment and neighborhood in Queens, New York City. After the loss of her Mother a few years ago, her Father has developed a drinking problem and she, as a result, has grown increasingly introverted and socially phobic. It is a coming of age story that showcases Violetta's developing obsessions with a Dominatrix, who lives across the street, and a young skater boy, Justin (Peter Louis Shaw), who practices nearby her home.

DIRECTOR'S NOTE: "Violetta" is about a young girl striving for human connection in an isolating and dangerous world. It is about the psychological avenues a person might travel when there is an offset of power dynamics within their family, and how Violetta is striving to understand this all; as her soul begins to steer her towards her own independence. Violetta is not aware of her own motivations, and is forced therefore to allow her desires to lead her into strange worlds, interactions, and discovery.
